White House Provides Sirica Tapes of 10 Conversations

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2 (AP) -Judge John Sirica received the tapes of 10 more White House conversations today and gave President Nixon until Wedne to surrender notes of his Watergate conversations with key aides in March and April 1973.

The Supreme Court ruled last month that President Nixon must surrender tapes of 64 White House conversations to Judge Sirica under a subpoena requested by Watergate special prosecutor Leon Jaworski. Judge Sirica will review the material to decide how much of it Mr. Jaworski can use as evidence in the Sept. 9 trial of six former White House and Nixon re-election campaign aides charged with participating in the Watergate cover-up. The subpoens also calls for the White House to deliver documents related to the 64 conversations, including notes made by Mr. Nixon and his former top advisers, H. R. Haldeman, John Ehrlichman and Charles Colson.

Executive Privilege Some of the notes made by Ehrlichman, Colson and Mr. Haldeman were turned over today along with a White House brief claiming that much of the material should be withheld from Mr. Jaworski on grounds of executive

The White House brief said that the privilege is claimed for portions which "are not related to the subject matter before the

The tapes delivered to the court today contained 10 conversations involving Mr. Nixon, Mr. Haldeman, Ehrlichman and Colson in June, 1973, during the first days following the Watergate break-in and in February, March, April and June, 1973.

Tapes of 20 other conversations were delivered to Judge Sirica Wednesday. The judge also may have some tapes containing some of the other 31 conversations.

Dean Gets 1-4 Years For Role in Cover-Up

He Will Serve A Minimum Of 12 Months

By Fred Farris

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2 (IHT). John Dean 3d, President Nixon's principal accuser in the Watergate scandal, today was sentenced to serve one to four years in prison for conspiracy in the U.S. District Judge John Sirica released the 35-year-old attorney on personal bond until he begins his sentence Sept. 3. He will not be eligible for parole until he has served one year.

The judge said he would recommend that Mr. Dean serve his sentence in the minimum security prison at Lompoc, Calif. He commended Dean for helping to care for his wife's seriously ill mother and said he would delay the date of his confinement for

Dean became nationally known during his testimony about White House involvement in the coverup last summer before the tele-vised Senate Watergate hearings. Pleaded Guilty

He pleaded guilty Oct. 19 to a single count of conspiracy in the cover-up and could have been sentenced to five years in jail and fined $10,000.

Today, standing alone before Judge Sirica, he said "The only thing I ask for is your compassion and understanding. I have done wrong, and I realize the wrong that I have done.

"I was involved in a corrup tion of government and abuse of high office. But to say I am sorry is not enough. I have done everything I can in the last 13 months to right the wrong. Whatever the court judges me, I will continue the same course,"

Dean, who is likely to be a principal witness for the prosecution at next month's Watergate cover-np trial bit his lip when Judge Sirica announced the sentence. He looked shaken when he left the court room with a U.S. marshal afterward. Appealing for leniency, Dean's counsel Charles Shaffer, said, Dean is the one who broke the case for the government. Every time he testified, he told the truth.

Dean, he said, "attempted to end the cover-up before there was any publicity."

Mr. Shaffer said Jodge Sirica would discover in listening to the tape of a Feb. 27, 1973, meeting with Mr. Nixon that Dean "explained the negative aspects of the cover-up to the President" on that date

The President has declared repeatedly that he first learned of the Watergate cover-up on March 21, 1973, when Dean warned him of "a cancer growing on the presidency." Mr. Nixon denies any participation in the cover-

Earlier this week, the President's former No. 2 side, John Ehrlichman, was sentenced to 20 months to five years in prison for conspiracy and perjury in the Ellsberg break-in case. Mr. Ehrlichman, formerly chief domestic affairs adviser to Mr. Nixon, will go on trial Sept. 9 with other former presidential aides in the cover-up case.

The cover-up conspiracy underlles the first of three impeachment articles against the President that the House Judiciary Committee voted to recommend to the full House.

The full House debate is likely to begin Ang. 19 and it, too, is expected to be televised. This emerged after a meeting yesterday between the Rules Committee and leaders of both the House and the Judiciary Committee. Meanwhile, there were these other developments:

harred the chief justice as presiding officer from voting to break procedural ties, established standards of evidence and declared that the President could be found guilty on "clear and con-vincing proof."

Several Republican offices, it was learned, have been researching the legality of passing leg-islation letting President Nixon escape all criminal prosecution if he agrees to resign before the Senate trial starts.

The mechanism suggested by a Capitol Hill attorney is a "plea in bar," the device usually used in plea-bargaining in American courts, in which the accused pleads guilty to a lesser charge in a manner that gives him doublejeopardy protection against future

The attorney suggested that the President could resign-without conceding specific guilt—in return for a joint resolution stating that the resignation consitutes a "plea in bar" against prosecution anywhere on any criminal charges arising from the basic set of which caused the resignation. The new president, Gerald Ford, presimably would sign legislation. Asked about

while, the discussion continued to focus on whether the Senate should set specific rules of cvidence for the Nixon trial; on whether it should set "clear and convincing" proof as the standard of proof of guilt instead of the tougher standard of "beyond a reasonable doubt" that applies in American criminal cases, and what precise role the chief justice, who presides over a Senate impeachment trial, should

The committee is working in the awareness that the outcome of a Senate impeachment trial, as well as public acceptance of any guilty verdict, would hinge to a great extent on whether American public opinion is convinced the trial procedures are fair. Guidelines Urged

Some senators fear that, unless definite guidelines are laid out in advance on standards of proof and admissibility of evidence, there may be charges of kangaroo court" from the White House. Alternatively, lack of clear evidence and proof rules could give Chief Justice Warren Burger. as presiding officer, the cpportunity to try to impose his own rules. They say Chief Justice Burger, for example, might well assert that beyond a reasonable donbt" should be the proper standard of proof.

To avert such possibilities, some senators favor adopting specific rules of evidence in advance and specific guidelines on a standard of proof. Others be-lieve existing rules and precedents are adequate and the should not bind itself to new ones. Any move by the presiding officer to interpose his own rules could be overridden by a majority vote, the Democratic whip, Robert Byrd, West Virginia, ready on the books.

Guards' Strike Disrupts System

France Takes Tough Steps in Jail Revol

PARIS, Aug. 2 (Reuters).— Convicts could neither be lailed nor released in France today because of a nationwide strike of prison guards and a prisoner

Interior Minister Michel Ponistowski ordered police to turn the ancient transit cells of the Paris Palace of Justice into a temporary prison to make sure that criminals newly convicted of serious crimes would not be set free for want of an available jail.

Mr. Poniatowski also doubled to 48 hours the time that police are allowed to detain suspects before having them charged.

These measures were taken as a result of the government's decision to toughen its policy toward both the striking guards and the rebellious prisoners. Justice Minister Jean Lecenuet has declared to prison guards that nothing will be done to improve the situation and their working conditions until calm is restored and Mr. Poniatowski has ordered police to shoot any convicts who try to escape.

The prison rioting, which has left six prisoners dead; caused widespread damage and prompted the guards' walkout, continued for a 13th day today. It spread to France's overseas territories with a mutiny in the jali on the Caribbean island of Guadeloupe. Convicts stoned guards and three persons were injured when police intervened. In France, the grievances of the prisoners and guards led to a rare show of solidarity. Support Freding

"His support is eroding every day," said Sen. Gale McGee, D-Wyo., who supported the President on most military and for-eign-policy issues during the Vietnam war.

"It's anybody's guess," said Russell Long. D-La, also a Niron supporter on many policy issues. "There may not be enough votes at the moment, but his position has eroded. There is every indication it's going to get worse. I'd say more than half would vote for conviction now. I don't know how I'm going to vote."

A prominent GOP senator has placed the anti-Nixon vote at 58 to 42 at present, another at: 60 to 20, with the 20 others possibly going either way. The Senate's two best Democratic vote-coun-ters both said that they "think there will be enough votes" unless the President comes up with new evidence to overcome the impact of what has already come out.

Sen John Tower, R-Texas, cautioned that it is "precipitous to say" how the final vote will come out, warning that neither he nor virtually any other senator he knew is "locked into any-

"Even people who have already tentatively made up their minds can change them." Sen. Tower said. He said he has no leaning one way or the other. (Sen. Tower is generally viewed as pro-Nixon.)

Widespread Feeling

Nevertheless, there appears to be strong and widespread feeling among senators that President Nixon has been losing ground for months and has made no gains whatever in the Senate.

Possibly the most significant factor is the shrinkage of what has been called the "hard-core" pro-Nixon vote. A few months ago, White House backers were walking around scoffing at the pos-sibility of impeachment and asserting, "We've got 40 to 50 votes against conviction by the Senate."

That confident tone is gone and conservatives who were believed to be Nixon bitter-enders are talking privately about wanting out. A Southern Republican, thought to be fanatically loyal to the President, has shifted in re-cent months and has been telling associates that unless the White House comes up with some amazing new syidence on Mr. Nixon's behalf, he finds it hard to imagine himself voting "no" when the verdict is voted on following the Senate trial. He said be fervently hopes the President will resign before it comes to that and save the nation and the GOP from severe disruption. This view is shared by many Republicans.

Sloppy Records Blamed in 'Lost' $5 Million in N.Y.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2 (AP).— Investigators say almost $5.4 million in securities reported missing from a city vault apparently just could not be found because of sloppy bookkeeping.

Richard Kub, Manhattan dis-trict attorney, said Wednesday that investigators traced all but $84,001 of the securities after only a few days.

The securities were reported missing two weeks ago by an accounting firm during an audit commissioned by Harrison Goldin, who succeeded Mayor Abraham Beame as controller.

City - investigators searched records to reconstruct the flow of the securities in and but of the vault.

After the first day, they identified $4,092,000 of the securities as short-term U.S. Treasury notes. They were properly redeemed at maturity, but the transactions were apparently not entered in the records. Similarly, they found receipts and other documents that identified most of the remaining $1,235,008.

By George Lardner Jr.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2 (WP). -Rep. James Jooes D-Okla., in n memn that he now describes as pure fiction, wrote the As-sociated Milk Producers, Ioc., that he got President Lynooc Johnson to approve a lame-duck decision on milk price supports at a time when the dairy lobby was trying to hire Mr. Jones as one of its lawyers.

Mr. Jones was President Johnson's appointments secretary before he left the White House in January, 1969, and joined the milk producers cooperative, on a $40,000-a-year retainer.

On Dec. 26, 1968, departing Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman announced that milk price supports would be continued at the then-prevailing level of $4.28 a hundredweight through President Nixon's first year in office.

Simply "Tail Stery"

Rep. Jones acknowledged yesterday that he wrote a memo in 1972 to AMPI, in which he claimed credit for the decision. But he said it was simply a "tall story" made up to protest AMPI's plans to end his employment.

"The politically smart thing to do would be to say nothing," the 35-year-old congressman declared of the note. The facts are that the milk price decision didn't even come to the President."

Rep. Jones said he was suffer-ing from the flu and "dizzy on some sort of drug" his doctor had given him when he wrote the

The Jones memo was released yesterday among the evidence compiled by the Senate Watergate committee in its investigations of the milk producers' political dealings.

ter Mr. Freeman's appouncement. The former Johnson aide suid he did not know what prompted Mr. Freeman to make the lameduck decision but Rep. Jones guessed that incoming Ninon rdministration officials might have invited it to avoid "the heat" of making the determination thenselves after only a couple of months in office. In any event, Rep. Joues said the memo was "just inaccurate, My conscience is good."

How Good Is Détente?

attempt to block establishment by Bonn of an environmental agency in West Berlin is one that affects the fundamentals of the Soviet-American relationship. East German violations of the 1972 quadripartite agreement guaranteeing "unimpeded access" to Berlin pollute the overall politics of detente.

Without Soviet support, the vehement East German press campaign against the projected environmental office would never have been followed by traffic slowdowns on the autobahn to Berlin and a refusal to permit an environmental official to pass.

The United States now bas rightly decided to delay the imminent establishment of diplomatic relations with East Germany, pending resolution of the dispute. But 104 other countries have exchanged ambassadors with East Germany, mostly in the wake of the quadripartite Berlin agreement: and there is little likelihood that they will break relations. The question raised now is how good

Another question raised is whether it is

The critical issue raised by East Germany's sound to make agreements with Communist countries that enable them to pocket Western concessions while leaving them in position to repudiate their own.

> It was always obvious that the 1972 guadripartite agreement could not change the geographic location of Berlin, 110 miles within East Germany. For West Berlin, vulnerability was to become security through iegal commitments by the Soviet Union and East Germany to keep hands off the access routes. The question raised now is how good is Moscow's word?

> The Soviet Union is offering detente to the United States and improved political relations to obtain trade and American high technology. The high technology, once transmitted, becomes Soviet property beyond recall. But the improved political relations depend on Moscow's pledged word and can be repudiated from one day to the next.

> What Moscow must realize now is that East German interference with the Beriln access routes raises basic questions about Soviet good faith.

Turkish 'Truce'

Turkey's continued violations of the Cyprus truce, right on the heels of a second cease-fire agreement, are an affront to its silies in NATO and the world community in the UN.

The Security Council's one-day delay in authorizing interposition of the UN peacekeeping force-as a result of a Soviet veto. which now has been withdrawn-dees not justify in any way the succession of new Turkish violations: selzure of Greek Cypriot villages: orders to UN units to leave the Turkish occupation zooe, and the continued Turkish military buildup on the island.

The terms obtained in the Geneva peace negotiations were substantially in Turkey's favor. For Turkey now to exploit its advantages to improve its position further in violation of solemn agreements can only handicap the future prospects of a lasting settlement and undermine the new Athens government

Turkish Premier Ecevit's threat to improve the arms and training of irregular Turkish Cypriot forces in areas of Cyprus outside the Turkish occupation zone, rather than rely on UN protection as in the past, comes at a moment when increased cooperation with the UN is what is required. Equally ominous is Mr. Ecevit's claim that Turkey has the right under the new Geneva sccords and the 1950 agreements to reinforce its units on Cyprus at will.

There are other indicators that Turkeyinstead of seeking an early political settlement maintaining an independent, unitary Cyprus-is digging in for a long stay that would, in effect, impose partition and even "double Enosis"—union of the two parts of the island with Greece and Turkey respectively. Mr. Ecevit and Turkey's energy minister have spoken of a crash program to build a large power plant, fuel storage and air and seaport facilities on Cyprus, pius a submarine pipeline from Turkey to supply water to Kyrenia on Cyprus. Neither Turkey's ailies in NATO nor the UN can accept such a program and it is important that they make this clear immediately. As supplier of arms to Turkey, the United States has-or ought to have-particularly strong leverage. THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Signal From Lisbon

de Spinola of the promulgation of a new law permitting Portugal to free Angola, Mozambique and Guinea-Bissau gives proof forming policy into political reality. Althat Lisbon has developed a clear policy line though the issue of independence for Guion independence for its African colonies.

The coup last April indicated a sharp change in Portugal's course, from the grim preservation of its African empire by any means necessary, to recognition of 20thcentury African realities. But then, the new government sent out alternating signals as to just what the new policy was to be. President Spinola favored granting the colonles a substantial amount of autonomy within a Portuguese federation. Others in the government were promising full independence within the year. The uncertainty was heightened by the downfall of the provisional cabinet just two months after it had been installed,

President Spinola's announcement puts the government squarely in line with the position favored by the Armed Forces Move-

The announcement by President Antonio ment, the principal architect of the coun. and with the African liberation movement.

What remains is the hard task of transnea-Bissau is all but settled, the transfer of power in Mozambique and Angola raises difficult questions. Terrorist activities generally attributed to right-wing elements opposed to independence have been reported in both territories. In Mozambique, Portugal must come to terms with the Mozamhique Liberation Front. In Angola, Lisbon faces not one but three liberation movements. In both areas, there is the major problem of the legitimate interests of substantial white settler populations.

Thus, while independence for Portuguese Africa will not automatically follow at onca from President Spinola's announcement, the development of a clear policy in Lisbon now means that the last great colonial empire In Africa is nearing its historic end.

International Opinion

On Nixon Resigning

On the whole, and especially from the point of view of America's foreign allies, the halance comes out in favor of [Nixon's] resignation, though subject to certain reservations. In the first place, it should be delayed until the full House of Representatives has voted, probably by August 23. This would at least allow the first stage of ths impeachment procedure to be completed. and would put on record a clear expression of congressional opinion. Secondly, Mr. Nixon should find the courage to make a sufficient admission of responsibility to abort the birth of a stab-in-the-back legend. He would have nothing to lose and might regain a little moral stature by doing so. -From the Times (London).

South Korean View of Threat

What makes us all the more unhappy is the fact that such a distinguished scholar as Edwin Reischauer . . is trying to disparage the North Korean threat for purposes less than the supreme call of this nation (South Korea) at this time-prevention of another war on this peninsula. His attempt (before the U.S. House Foreign Affairs subcommitteel to link American aid to civil ilbertles in Korea blindfolds him to the basic danger facing South Korean liberty on a much higher plane. It is hard to understand why the scholar . . . is shying away from the clear danger of the Korean peninsula which would at once affect Japan, and for that matter the United States also.

The Koreans are not content, as much as their American friends are, with the extent of democratic institutions they have today. But their desire for democratic development can not and should not turn them away from the more immediate and imperative need for saleguarding what is essential to them-national security. The U.S. presence in Korea continues to be the chief deterrent to North Korea's second military adventure. -From the Korea Herald (Seoul).

Mideast Peace Talks

It will be painful for the Palestinians to put their foot in the door at the Middle East talks in Geneva. But once there they can hardly be ejected. Without a Palestinian presence the ultimate chances of a settlement are diminished. The problem at present, tortuous for Palestinians and Israalis alike, is in what form and on what negotiating basis. -From the Guardian (London).

Daddy, Did Cars Ever Use Oil?

By Bart Mills

ONDON,-International offmen today must feel a little like the railroaders of nearly a century sgo.

The era of buccaneering expansion is over, political regulation is tighteniog and the future is bleak as low-profit utilities from. For oilmen now, there are fewer and fewer places in the world to lay new tracks, and there is increasing pressure on govern-ments everywhere to regulate Governments in major oil-producing countries will within a few years be the sellers of 100 per cent of their own crude, up from zero per cent five years sgo. Governments in those consumer countries that still have free markets in petroleum are moving toward sllocating market shares and setting prices. As a result, major oil companies ars becoming mere middlemen, as crude-oil procurement and product distribution increasingly become government concerns.

Oil is simply the latest commodity or service to become too important to be handled by the people who know most about it. That's said with no bitterness. Take the railroads again. The railroad men knew their husiness, and they knew to get out business that was unprofitable. The passenger lines were their most socially useful service. Government stepped in and kapt the money-losing lines runningsome of them anyway.

New Energy Forms

No self-respecting major oil company these days expects to reach the year 2000 with oil energy as its major product. They'll be marketing different forms of energy and different uses for oil. Like the cigarette companies who diversified madly out of cigarettes, oil companies are branching into coal snd nuclear power. They're also beeding the words of the Shah of Iran ("oil is too valuable to burn") by planning for the day when the petrochemical industry will consume a quarter or more of the world's oil production instead of just 6 per cent as at present.

The Continental Oil Co. and other oil concerns are already among America's largest coal producers. Gulf and Shell are accruing losses of hundreds of millions of dollars as the cost of entering the nuclear-reactor business. Standard Oil of Ohio gets 43 per cent of its revenues from coal and chemicals.

But why should oil ever become unprofitable? Haveo't all the major companies just been reporting fantastic profit in-Yes, but these may be the last days of nonadministered gasoline pricing in America.

In Europe, many price decisions are made, formally or informally, by governments determined not to allow oil companies to profit from the producer nations' price increases.

As the Sandis and the Kuwaitia and others become more and more adept at using supply constrictions to control prices will move up still higher. Only softheartedness would keep the Arabs from playing the market this way. Have you ever met a soft-bearted Arab oil man? No, and as prices rise Washingtoo will discern a responsibility to cushion the blow on motorists. Gasouge retailing will beincreasingly unprofitable.

Service-station operators will turn in their tire-battery-accessory franchises and sell Kentucky Fried Chicken instead, while their suppliers, the oilmen, become nuclear men. Good old government will man the pumps and clean your windshield. Don't laugh, The United States is one of the few major Western countries without at least one government oil concern holding a leading share of the market. In Italy, the government seems determined to fix prices so as to drive private enterprise out of the industry, and both Sbell and British Petroleum have sold their assets there in the last year. In France, a law guarantees one of the two national oil concerns a quarter of the retail market. In West Germany, a price dispute brought the companies and the government to the brink of a legal conflict. In Belgium, refinery operators closed their plants rather than sell their products at prices the government was dictating. Britain and Sweden are others with strong government presences in oil mar-

Plastics

A word about plastics. As any graduate knows, plastics are the coming thing. Here's why. Oil being in short supply and increasingly expensive, it becomes less and less economical to use oil energy to power the factories that make things like paper bags and glass bottles. It makes better sense to use the oil not as energy but as the raw material for petrochemicals and plastics. Right now, it takes one and a half times as much oil to make a paper bag as it does to make a polyethylene sack of the same capacity. It takes two and a half times as much oil to make a nonreturnable glass bottle as does to make a polyvinyl chloride container of the same capacity. These ratios can only

So over the next decade or so the oil companies will do a lot of weeping and walling. Like financially pressed Lockheed in a world crying for airplanes, they'll have increasing difficulty doing their traditional jobs. Governments make the rules, and governments will have to bail them out.

But further down the road, the oil companies are already strong growth areas like nuclear Cyprus itself provides a base for British air forces although they cannot overtiv work for the allianca because of the republic's nonaligned status.

A somewhat similar partial restriction applies to Malta where the North Atlantic powers are represented by a British rear. admiral and Britain can use naval facilities until the decade's end. The Soviet Union is barred from Maltese havens and, in exchange, the United States has pledged not to send military planes or ships

But the most glittering jewel in the diadem of islands stretching across the inland sea is Crete whose famous port of Suda Bay is one of the world's great natural harbors. And, just as a home-porting agreement for the U.S. Navy in Greece caused Wash-ington to overlook some of the nastiness of the recent Athens junta, the availability of Suda Bay's naval facilities also clearly softened U.S. policy.

Help From Athens

As a consequence, without advertising the fact, Greece allowed the U.S. Sixth Fleet to use needed naval facilities during the Arab-Israeli war last October-just as if that crisis had been covered by NATO, which wasn't the case. Suda Bay was the fleet's main base during the October confrontation. Although the Sixth Fiset operates all over the Mediterranean and beyond its western entry at Rois, Spain, the Soviet naval contingent in this area generally con-centrates just off the shores of the Middle East. Therefore the Sixth Pleet spends most of its tims in the Ionian Sea and the so-ealled Levantine basin. -The latter is the principal area of potential trouble. Therefore the Sixth Fleet maintains a strong forcs south of Crete where Russian submarines are considered a potential threat. These now are deprived of recommissiones and strike support from long-range Soviet aircraft that used to be based in Aswan, Egypt, but have been eased out by Cairo.

The Beginning But Not the E

WASHINGTON.—The conventional view here now is that this is the beginning of the end for President Nixon but between the beginning and the end -between voting articles of impeachment in the Houss Judiciary Committee and voting conviction in the Senate-lie many political struggles and legal tengles that could go on for months.

Time, with fis unpredictable events and changing moods, could be a critical factor. For example, the impeachment trial of President Andrew Johnson in the Senate lasted three months-from Feb. 25, 1868, until May 26, 1868, and this raises a key question.

Does the authority of the present 93d Congress expire at midnight on Jan. 2, 1975, as Ben. Henry Jackson of Washington says it does? And if so, would an uncompleted trial in the Senate have to start all over again? Jackson says "yes," and insists that the entire question would have to go back to the House Judiciary Committee in the 94th Congress.

Trial Rules

Senate leaders, of course, are trying to speed up the proces by drafting rules for the trial that would avoid this complication, but the timetable is not wholly in their hands.

For example, if the House votes to impeach the President around the end of August or the beginning of September, the President will ask for time to prepare his defense before the Senats. The majority leader, Sen. Mike Manafield, is thinking that two weeks would be sufficient for this preparation, but if the President asks for a month or even longer. it would be hard to deny him the time he requests, Also, while the Senate can set rules that avoid fillbustering the issue by droning on with irrelevant material, it would be difficult to deny the President and his attorneys the opportunity to call as many defense witnesses as he likes, another time-consuming

It is even possible that the trial could get into procedural arguments, such as over the authority of the present Senate after Jan. 2, in which case the President could claim that he was denied due process and refer the argument to the courts.

Presimably, common sense would prevail at some point in this process, but a long trial cannot be ruled out, and this presents the awkward prospect that the President could be impeached by the House in August and then have to try both to defend himself and exercise his fact, you can hardly run into a congressman these days who doesn't have some suggestion about what the President should do to change the present trend toward impeachment, government paralysis, and conviction. Among the suggestions are the following:

• Sen. Goldwater thinks he should go before the House and Senate personally, respond to questions and defend himself. The theory is that this would influence the House, the Senate and the television audience in his

. Failing this, he should go on television from the White House and argue his case directly to the voters

• If impeached by the House, he should region rather than risk a long paralyzing trial in the Senate and the interruption of the governments other urgent business

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2 (WP). a barrel and higher. The Treasury Department bclieves the United States will pay a record $25 billion for imported oil this year, a total expected to cause a balance-of-payments def-icit of at least $2 billion.

Higher prices for foreign oil and near-record imports have forced the Treasury to revise upward the estimate of the oil import bill. The estimate made in January by the National Petroleum Council was $20 billion. An informed Treasury official said yesterday that the import bill would be at least $25 billion.

BREGENZ FESTIVAL Verdi-When He Was Still Donizetti

By David Stevens

REGENZ, Austria, Aug. 2 (IHT) -In a year that has seen some brisk activity in Verdian archaeology, the Bregenz Festival should get some kind of award for its aptly chosen, splendidly sung and buoyantly staged revival of "Il Finto Stanisiao," the composer's second opera and his only comic work besides "Falstaff," half a century

For one thing, the work really is a rarity-not just because it is so little-known, but because it reveals a composer that even experienced opera-goers do not know. Most Verdi revivals-of. say, "Attila" or "I Vespri Siciliani" or 'Luisa Miller"-show a slightly different stage in the development of the composer we already know. "Il Finto Sta-nisho" (alias "Un Giorno di Regno") shows the 26-year-old who had not quite decided to stop being Donizetti (the reigning active composer of the day-1340 and start being Verdi.

It is a two-act melodramma giocoso, in fact an opera buffa the traditional mold to a well-carpentered libretto by Felice Romani (the experienced collaborator of Rossini, Bellini and Donizetti, among others). Although predictable in its situations, it is full of good opportunities for comic singing-actors, rich in ensembles ranging up to a septet, and with plenty of chances for solo bel canto flights. Verdi met the challenge, mostly in the vocabulary of the moment, but with occasional outbursts of primitive energy and original melody that come like modest calling cards of the near future. There is also a beguiling quintet that is really a love duet set against a comic male trio-they are discussing some nonsense about the artillery disposition of Filippo Crivelli, who has staged the work before in Italy, invented some droll business that was put over by his high-spirited cast, and Gianni Quaranta's setsmainly natural-wood colored lattices-were attractively rustic period pieces, colorfully amplified by Dada Scaligeri's costumes. Bregenz's annual staple, a production on the floating stage on Lake Constance, was devoted this year to "Carmen." Given the imperatives the huge stage some distance from the audience, the watery setting and no chance for scenery changes—the festival team came up with an ingenious and colorful production.

Toni Businger constructed a multi-level Seville that included plausible locations for each of the four acts—which were played without an intermission. Thus, the second-act tavern could be seen open for business before Act I ended, and the house fronts of the first act became the exterior of the bull ring in the final act. Something has to be aquatic in Bregenz, so Bizet's mountaineering smugglers went maritime, being led to their cove swimmer who paddled in from the lake while holding a torch up with one arm. He took a ell-earned bow for his exertions, although he got no program

Paul Vasil's effective staging also required a lot of movemen he got it from principals and supers alike. Subtlety has to be sacrificed here, but all the singing was full-voiced enough to reach across the water to the grandstand, and Anton Guadagno onducted with the vigor of a bull-ring maestro.

Rain is no stranger to Bregenz and only on their third try (a week ago tomorrow) did the firstnight cast of Joann Grillo (Carmen), Andrej Kucharsky (José) Renate Lenhart (Micaela) and Claudio Nicolai (Escamillo) get to the end of the opera. This time the thunder clapped as Don José pulled out his dagger, lightning flashed as he stuck it into Carmen, and the rain held off until everyone was racing for

THE ART MARKET

Porcelain-The Gaudier, the Better

By Souren Melikian

TONDON (INT).—Taste makes curious business. In the late 18th century and early 20th, rich people in Western Europe hought 18th century fakes. Not take-fakes, but imitations. The inspiration was Prench; the results, mostly rubbish, albeit of different origins. There were "18th-century French ceramics" of the Meissen stemp, of Berlin interpretation, of Bohemian origin, not to speak of French imitations.

The resulting porcelain appealed to the nouveaux riches, to the financiers of Franz Joseph's Austria, to Kaiser Wilhelm's Germany. And the gandier, the Suddenly, while the art-market blue chips are faltering (IET, July 30), this kind of rubhish is doing very well as anothen. Again, it's a question of aesthetics. What, to many people, seems grady appeals, apparently, to buyers with dollars to spare in the oil-producing countries, as well as to Italians and South Americans. In all fairness it should be pointed out that aesthetic standards vary; one man's treasure is another man's piece of junk, European dealers with contacts in Italy, South America and the petrodollar countries are beginning to capitalize on this difference in sesthetic optic.

Examples

Take, for instance, the sale of English and Conti-nental ceramics Monday at Christie's In London. The audience was small, almost entirely composed of dealers, few of them English. Most of the lots were hideous—there were 288 of them. Haruly may bore dates; I doubt that any object had been made bore dates; I doubt that any object had been made before 1830. Yet, it seemed that the more hideous the work, the better it solth

Christie's prindently referred throughout its cata-logue to objects made in the "Sevres pattern," underscoring the 19th-century obsession (in Europe) with 18th-century French taste. For instance, a "Sevres pattern" tea set with portraits of court beauties and flowers went for $241 to a certain Mr. Singer. Another nightmare, a vase, probably Germanic, went for £73.50 to a Mr. Desmond to the dismay of an American dealer whose overbid failed to attract the auctioneer's More serious stuff was to come. "A fine Sevres

This is about twice the price of a genuine Louis XVI clock in marble and ormolu. Another Sevres pattern dish, painted with a

That was peaning.

Two huge ormolu-mounted vases (95 centimeter: high) with portraits of the Bonaparte family from Uncle Napoleon and Aimt Josephine to Napoleon III Empress Engenie and the Prince Imperial went up to a staggering $2,100. A Mr. Nyman got them Next another pair of vases (only 70 centimeter high), pointed with "classical scenes," made $1,970. Again, Nyman was the buyer.

The climax of the sale-and the epitome of bat taste (so bad you couldn't call it kitsch or camp)came with two big (85.5 centimeters high) Sevre veses, showing the triumph of Aphrodite and th birth of Venna. These were 130 years old, as could be inferred from the monogram of Louis-Philippe of Prance: They went to Nyman for £2,318.

By then bidding had become aggressive. Hug Mortey-Fletcher, a director of Christie's, was n longer just taking bids but giving a performance. H would bend over his podlum, stare at the bidden anart the bids as he spelled them out, then pitch hi voice higher. Berlin porcelain plaques got passe around, again and again, bringing ever more im probable prices. And so it went.

probable prices. And so it went.

An American dealer was beside himself—he has been outbed 10 times within a few minutes. "You are turning it into a nightmare," he yelled at hi rival, Nyman. But, in the hubbuh among the rest less dealers, hardly anyone heard him.

A Success

A handful of professionals—Italians, German, renchmen and Americans—had made the day While the rest of the market is sagging, no perioporcelsin is doing remarkably well. It is reall impossible to make comparisons. The category of Botten Munich porcelain circa 1910, imitating Napoleon III porcelain, imitating 18th-centur Sevres," can hardly be said to be established. In this was certainly one of the most successful sale of hideous objets d'art that I have ever seen. In contrast at Sotheby's sale of glass on th

Mervyn Willis, who directs, tries to disguise the shortcomings by mixing styles and having most of his characters make their entrances and exits as if they were practicing for a hundred meter sprint. He dresses the soldiers as samurai warriors, turns bettles into a Japanese dance routine-definitely a nono-and where the text calls for dores to flutter, releases some gas-filled balloons, 11 like to think that they perhaps carried ssages from the actors: 'Help, I am being held prisoner in

There are not many actors who contingingly compete with wind-twittering birds and airplanes overhead. Most of the performances are crude without being heroic loud but ordinary. David Dodimead's Theseus is one of the exceptions. Philip Bowen and Martin Potter, who once played a variation on this role in Ection's "Salvicco," make some-what plain heroes and Lea-Dre-gorn is altogether too arch and knowing as the maid who lights.

At the Mayfair Theatre there is: a cosy rerue "The Golden-Pathway Annual" written and performed by John Harding and John Burrows, with admirable support from the other members of the cast. Maggie McCarthy and Mark Wing-Davey. It is suffused with nostalgia and is as Brit-ish as cricket, incomprehensible to those who cannot respond to such arcane symbols of post-warlife as demob suits, children's hour on BBC Radio, Enid Blyton, and Winston Churchill.

The authors have captured with precision the experience of growing up in the 1940s and 1950s, of the experience of a generation of niversity graduates from working-class homes who were brought up to believe that education offered them an escape to a better life but discovered that they were trapped by the system as surely as were their inthers.

This bitter theme underlies a collection of disparate sketches that often lack sharpness and point. The detail is perfect—but that's the least to be expected from such an autobiographical work as this. The authors let their sense of humor lead them away from the main theme, following their invention wher-

Top Marks for Cranko's Stuttgart Ballet

By Oleg Kerensky

ONDON, Aug. 2 (IRT).-It is incredible that the Stuttgart Ballet which John Cranko revitalized 14 years ago bas oevec been to London until now, despite Its successes io New York and Moscow. And it is very sad that its belated triumph at Covent Garden cannot be shared by Cranko, who died suddeoly year at the age of 45. Ho would have been proud of the way his company has held the Covent Garden stage, and delighted by the war in which En-glish critics and audiences here now recognized it as one of the world's leading ensembles.

Some of us have been preaching the gospel of Cranko and Stutigart for many years, but even the most cothusiastic must have had some doubts bow the company would look lo a house associated with the Royal Ballet, New York City Ballet, the Bolshol and the Kirov. The answer is that it has fitted easily into that class, without any special allowances having to be made. It has become crystal clear that, with Cranko's death, the world of ballet lost the most entertaining and versatile choreographer of his generation.

The opening night gala was "Onegin," Cranko's most successful three-act ballet, originally rejected by Covent Garden's planoers because it tells the same story as Tchaikovsky's opera. Like MacMillan's recent "Manon," with which it must inevitably be compared, it uses music by the composer of the opera, but takeo eotirely from other works. In Cranko's case this odd recipe works well, partly hecause Tchaikovsky is a more varied and more dramatic composer than Massenet, and because the Tchaikovsky pieces bave been very skillfully selected and arranged by Kurt-Heinz Solze.

Ingenious

Cranko was remarkably ingenious at telling the story en-of free Shakespeare. Mel Gussow found an "unsteadiness' about the performance, directed by David Margolies. The debase-ment of Falstaff, says Gussow.

might be compared to a tele vision spinoff capitalizing on a successful series. In Merry Wives' Falstaff is Oot so much manages to maintain his dignity.

It is an uphill struggle. There are some classic lines and a few funny scenes. However, much of the writing is sub-Shakespeare, and much of the humor is blunt.

Falstaff's continuing gullibility grows tiresome and there are also gaps in plot and motivation."

Gussow found the performances of mixed quality, praising Hugbes.

Marcia Rodd and Cynthia Harris.

He found Santo Loquasto's ser-nery "solid."

This is not such a successful ork as "Onegin," because Stolze's Scarlatti-based score dull and undramatic, as are Elizabeth Dalton's sets. But agaio Cranko has told the story brilhaolly with considerable comic invection. Some of the comedy is too crude, but the pas de deux m which Kate and Petruchio knock each other about, and the wedding scene in which he forces her to nod her head and trips her into kneeling, are brilliant. Haydee's Kate is a tough little miux. She is as credible holding her fists up in preparation lo box, as is playing the gentle and soulful Tatiana. In the second cast, Birght Keil and Vladimir Klos danged and acted so well that nobody seeing the ballet for the first time would be conscious

VW Diversifying to Cattle In Brazil's Amazon Basin

By Marvine Howe

PIO DE JANEIRO (NYT).—Volkswagen is diversifying in Brazil for the first time—into cattle.

The Brazilian subsidiary of the West German auto maker, which is Brazil's biggest automobile manufacturer, has now begun a $30 million cattle industry in the Amazon basin area.

VW's new venture reflects a shift in the Brazilian government's Amazon policy to place emphasis on the participation of large companies, rather than small settlers, for the development of the vast virgin forest area.

The VW cattle farm covers 56,000 acres and is situated at Santana do Araguaia, near a branch of the Amazon River in the northern state of Para.

Wolfgang Franz Sauer, president of VW of Brazil and of the new cattle-raising enterprise, Vale do Rio Cristalino, presented the company's new plans to the Amazon development agency

The company, according to a spokesman, "is expecting approval at any time" and thus has already begun clearing 28,000 acres of forest for grazing land. The rest of the land must be kept forested, according to conservation laws. By 1982, VW plans to be producing 110,000 head of cattle—mainly for export to the European Economic Community, Japan and the United States, company sources said.

"We went into the cattle industry for economic reasons and in answer to the government's appeal to large companies to participate in the development of the Amazon," a company spokesman said recently.

The economic reasons are clear. The Amazon development agency is offering extremely attractive incentives for investment in priority areas. These apply to companies ready to go into the area by Dec. 31, 1974. The VW spokesman described them as comprising a 50 per cent income-tax reduction for 10 years and exemption from duty and taxes on machinery and equipment imported for the Amazon area project.

VW officials have acknowledged that two-thirds of the $30 million investment will result from investment incentives.

Japan Seen Catching Up to U.S. by 1985

By Sam Jameson

TOKYO. Herman Kahn, the Hudson Institute director who first predicted that Japan would surpass the United States in gross national product (GNP), now thinks Japan will catch up in terms of per capita national income—if not GNP—by 1985, farlier, he had predicted that accomplishment by the year 2000. The "think tank" specialist, often consulted by the U.S. Defense Department, said Japan was overestimating the burden of its new oil import bill and Oil prices, he declared, are bound to come down. The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) is now oil a day but the world is con-

NEW YORK, Aug. 2 (NYT) --A number of Western European. Middle Eastern and South American governments are studying the purchase of A10 close support planes produced by Fairchild Republic division of Fairchild Industries, according to reliable sources.

The Air Force plans to buy 729 of the Alos for a total cost of $2,3 billion, and a week ago the Defense Department gave its final approval for the project.

U.S. Tax Writers Cut Depletion Allowance

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2 (Reuters). The House Ways and Means Committee voted today to reduce the oil depletion tax allowance benefit this year to 15 per cent from 22 per cent and to phase it out completely by 1978.

The depletion allowance currently is worth more than $2 billion a year in tax savings to the of industry. The committee agreed to include in the tax reform bill its earlier decision to tax the windfall profits of all companies and to phase out the oil depletion allowance. But committee chairman Wilbur Mills, D-Ark, made an important change to start the phase-out of the oil depletion allowance this year, instead of waiting until 1975 to begin the Problems Exist The difference, if oil remains priced at high levels, would be that Japan would have to forgo much of the investment overseas that had been foreseen before the oil crisis, he said. "That would hurt developing countries more than It would hurt Japan," he said Mr. Kahn did see two problems for Japan.

One was a labor shortage-but Japan could solve that by importing labor, perhaps from South Korea, for temporary periods to work on specific construction projects.

The other was potential political instability, arising from the decline of strength of the ruling Liberal Democratic party and the drooping popularity of Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka. "Other countries can get along

Top Probe of Price-Fixing

Major Industries Are Called Special Target

By Eileen Shanahan

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2 (NYT).

Thomas Kauper, head of the Justice Department's Anti-Trust
Division, said today that his office was launching a drive aimed at uncovering price-fixing and other actions that restrain com-petition in major industries.

Industries dominated by a few companies will be the particular target of this "intensive review."

Mr. Kauper said. He said his legal and economic staffs intended to examine those "concentrated" industries for evidence of price rigidity and other behavior that could not be explained in terms of market supply and demand. The staff will also look for evidence that new companies are being kept out of various industries and markets by illegal means and for other anticompetitive behavior.

Mr. Kauper made his comments in a speech to a group of House Republicans that had asked him to appear before them.

In his uncompromising defense of strict anti-trust enforcement policies, Mr. Kaoper rejected the philosophy of "those who cry that times are tough and the best way to help American business com-pete, both at home and abroad. is to relax the anti-trust laws."

Independent Position His response to such appeals, Mr. Kauper said, "is to demand facts and figures to show precisely how competition weakens and industry's ability to compete." "Such evidence is seldom forthcoming." he added. Mr. Kauper's statement appeared to be in conflict with one made last week by Roy Ash, the director of the Office of Management and Budget, and possibly with a state-ment by President Nixon.

Both Mr. Nixon and Mr. Ash, although vague in their com-ments, indicated a belief that some change in emphasis in tradi-tional anti-trust enforcement was desirable and would help the fight against inflation.

Wall Street Calls For Help From The White House

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2 (WP). -An ad hoc committee of Wall Street leaders descended on the White House vesterday asking President Nixon to create a new agency that would be solely concerned with insuring the health of the nation's capital-raising mechanism.

The group, beaded by Salim Lewis, senior partner of Bear, Stearns & Co., the investment banking firm, met with Treasury Secretary William Simon, presidential counsellor Kenneth Rush and special trade representative William Eberle

After the meeting, spokesmen for the group said they were told the proposal deserved more thought but would not be an easy thing to bring about.

"It is our opinion that the breakdown in the ability of our corporations and municipalities to raise capital is at a critical stage, and appropriate governmental attention to this matter must be given the highest priority," the group said in a letter to President Nixon. They proposed that the Presi-

Among reasons given for the current impairment of the equity and debt markets were "an inadequate tax structure for giving proper incentive for people to take risks, a pervasive criticism of all our institutions and an unaccept-

At a press conference, the leaders found themselves hard pressed to specify what kinds of actions could be taken by a new agency to return the stock and bond markets to a healthier state that were separate from general economic and monetary policy, which is in the hands of the President, Congress and the Fed and presumably would be outside the coordination of a capital mar-

NOTES ON LIFE

By Theodore Dreiser, Edited by Marguerite Tjader and John J. McAleer. University of Alabama. 346 pp. 314.50.

Reviewed by Jack Salzman appearance of a new Dreiser book was considered to be a literary "event." But now, almost 30 years after his death. Dreiser is little read and the publication of a new Dreiser is accompanied by little fanfare or interest. Sadly, "Notes on Life" will not do much, I think, to revive interest in him. It is a book for Dreiser scholars, and I'm afraid, only for them. Dreiser began working on "Notes on Life" as early as 1920, but it was only with the success of "An American Tragedy" in 1927 that be had enough financial security to explore in a systematic way his interest in human behavior and the most recent theories of physiologists and psychologists. By the time of his death in December, 1945, Dreiser had compiled thousands of sheets of notes which he had hoped to bring together as a final statement on his views of life and the meaning of man's existence. It is from this mass of material

Theodore Dreiser's manuscripts were eagerly sought by publishing houses and when the

that Marguerite Tjader has put together "Notes on Life." The problem with it is simple enough: Dreiser just was not a thinker, a philosopher, What he has to say is of interest only to the extent that it is the author of "Sister Carrie" and "An American Tragedy" who is struggling, sometimes desperately, to give meaning to his life; there is very little that is of intrinsic interest in Dreiser's world view.

Dreiser was, as we well know from his novels, a determinist who believed that the universe was a machine and man but a

U.S. Scientists To Sound Out Pyramid Room

MENIO PARE, Calif.. Aug 2 (AP).—A team of U.S. scientists will take a small portable "sounder" to Egypt next month in an effort to locate a suspected secret chamber in the pyramid of Khefren Egyptologists say Kheiren, son of Cheops, may have used more maginary architecture than his lather, who was buried in the Great Pyramid. While a chamber was found in Khefren's pyramid, Khefren's mummy wasn't. Thereforc, the reasoning goes, there must be another chamber to be found.

The battery-powered sounder should be able to find the chamber, says physicist Lambert Dolphin jr. of the Stanford Research Institute. The sounder emits low-frequency electromagnetic pulses, which penetrate stone, sand or earth, Mr. Dolphin says. When a wave hits a different density-such as an empty space—part of it bounces back as

THERE was a time when part of that machine, Life, as he tells us in a section entitled "Mechanism Called Life," "is not a substance, but a mechanical phenomenon: it is a dynamic and kinetic transference of energy determined by physicmode of association and succession-their harmony, in factwhich constitutes life."

Everything, we quickly gather, is to be seen in terms of change, of contrast: "No life, no death. No death, no life ... For life is change, contrast, And only out of the storm and strain can these come." Man has no free will; our minds are nothing but "expressions of an immense matter-energy synthesis and reactions . . . " We are buffeted about by exterior forces, no matter how we delude ourselves into thinking that we are free and independent beings. The "essential tragedy of life," Dreiser informs us, is that man basically "is a creation or mechanism, accidental or not, as you wish, or a force or forces which, insofar as anyone can determine is or are far more than his wildest flights of fancy suspects, the thing which he most craves to be, individual, en-during, but of which he is only a part and of which he is constantly seeking more—lije."
So it goes for almost 350 pages
—theme and variation, point and counterpoint, all on the subject of life. It is too much Dreser is neither poet nor philosopher; "Notes on Life" is naive, tedious. But then, what does any of this have to do with the Dreiser who really matters? That Dreiser transcended his ideas, as the writer who in 1900 stormed the barricades of genteel America with "Sister Carrie," the naturalist who wept for Jennie Gerhardt; the creator of Clyde Griffiths and "An American Tragedy," the writer who want-ed to join the Communist party at the same moment that he was creating Solon Barnes, his great Quaker hero ("The Bulwark). At its best. Dreiser's art could not be limited by his philosophy, just as "Notes on Life" cannot move beyond its lack of art. Dreiser, after all, was an ungainly, tire-some, frequently boorish man. But he also was a behemoth of a man, a writer whose humanity usually had to struggle against his own turgid prose. Certainly, he was not slways successful in the struggle, But there were moments when he was, when he lumbered into greatness. And it is for these occasions-milestones in the history of American letters -for the writing of "Sister Carrie" an "An American Tragedy" in particular, that Dreiser must be read and remembered.

Jack Saleman, an associate projessor of English at Brooklyn's Long Island University, is the author of the recently published "Theodore Dreiser: The Critical Reception," among other books. & The Washington Port.

Driver Finds 1st Taste Of Grand Prix Is Bitter

By Bernard Kirsch

ADENAU, West Germany, Aug. 2 (IHT). - There is a wrong driver's name on the team truck and another wrong name on the program. The name of the driver the Token formula-one car is Ian Ashley, who will be making his grand prix debut on the wrong

Ashley swallowed his first hitter taste of the big time today in a qualifying ruo for Sunday's German Grand Prix. The trials and race are being held on the Nuerburgring track, known with-out affection as The Ring. Ashley's Token was 36 seconds slower than the best car, a Ferrari which clocked 7 minutes 00.8 seconds on the 14.2-mile circuit, which has nearly 20 humps, 170 corners, three slots where the cars hecame airbound and a hairpin turn seconds after the starting line.

The twisting road defeated one man today, New Zealander Howden Ganley. His Japanese Maki skidded, went off a guard rail and when it finally came to a stop with the entire front demolished, both of Ganley's ankles were broken. He was taken to local hospital for treatment. Ganley had raced at the ring before, but this was his first grand prix race in more than three months. Mike Hallwood also crashed in his McLaren, but was uninjured.

Took a Tour

Ashley met The Ring for the first time yesterday morning, when he paid 5 deutsch marks to take a tour of the treacherous course in his rented car. The ides was to become acquainted with the circuit. When there is no racing here, anyone may take his car for a spin on the track. Ashley was on the course again today with the 30 grand prix drivers who are here for the 10th race of the season. After going for his first lap, the 26-yearold Englishman, whose father was a test pilot for the Concorde prototype, said that "on ooe bump, you come off it faster than you thought you would. What wou do then is swallow your pride and back off a little." That wasn't the ooly action for the young driver today.

His car, which he met for the first time Wednesday, gava him almost as much trouble as The Ring. Pirst his gear lever broke. "I was lucky," he said, "It hap-pened oo a straight. If it had happened on a bend, it would have been too late."

Then, with the action almost finished for today, the Token got flat tire on e bending turn of the longest course on the grand prix circuit. "I wanted to go left, but the car kept on going right," Ashley said. "I didn't even have time to be frightened." But the machine will be back tomorrow for the second day of trials and Ashley will be a day away from his first grand prix drive.

When this formula-one season started, Ashley was driving a formula-5000 car while Tom.
Pryce, whose name is on the truck, was the team's driver. Pryce moved over to the Shadow team and his place in the driver's seat was taken by David Purley, whose name is on the program.

Purley tried to qualify at the last grand peix, in Brands Hatch, England, but failed. Then a backer who had promis ed £40,000 pulled out of the grand prix scene and two new sponsors, Richard Oaten, an oil trader, and tha Chequered Flag Sports Car agents stepped in with tha money. One of the conditions of sponsorship was that Ashley Ashley and car will probably start way in the back of the fleld on Sunday. As of now, the front row is taken by Ferrari teammates Niki Lauda, a point behind leader Emerson Fittipaldi in the drivers' standings, and Clay Regazzoni, who is tied for third with Jody Scheckter.

"I inlend to take it easy and just finish the race," Ashley said. On The Ring, especially for a first-timer, it is a mighty goal.

Emperor's New Clothes

WASHINGTON-Chairman: The clerk will read the articles of abdication. Clerk: Resolved that the Emperor violated his oath of office when he paraded down the streets under a canopy with no clothes

That he made false and misleading statements to the effect that he was wearing clothes at the time, and that he was party to a coverup and interfered in

Bachwald a lawful investigatioo as to whether in effect he did on said day parade in the Chairman: Each member of this committee will have 5 minutes for the purposes of debate only. I recognize the courtier from Graninda. Grazinda: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. The question we have heeo asked to vote on today—a questioo that could affect the empire for generations to come-is did the Emperor know he had no clothes oo and what did he do about it. Let me review the evidence. The Emperor, we can all agree, spent the taxoayers' money on ciothes for himself. He had a coat for every hour of the day. Now from the Emperor's own parchmeots we know that oo June 17 two cheats arrived and claimed they were weavers and that they could make such magnificent clothes that they would become invisible to anyone who was unfit for the office he held.

We know the Emperor ordered a set of rohes and gave a great deal of cash in advance to the The Emperor then sent one of his closest aides to confirm that they indeed were working on his clothes.

When the aide went to see the cheats, he discovered that they weren't wearing anything at all The aide went hack and lied to the Emperor, Then oo March 21 the Emperor himself went to the weavers and he saw with his own eyes that there was no cloth; there were no trousers: there was no robe. Did he arrest the weavers? Did be report them to the r.

No. Mr. Chairman. He praised them as two of the finest men he had ever known and he told the country they had woven him a magnificent set of clothes. That, gentlemen, was the beginning of the coverup: 2 coverup that continued until the very day when the Emperor walked down our streets in nothing more than his birthday suit.

Chairman: Your time has expired. We will hear from the other side now. The courtier from Tearturnia.

Tearturnia: Mr. Chairman, I can't believe that I have been sitting here for six months and heard the same evidence as my learned friend from Grazinda. If you read the Emperor's parchments as I have done, you can only come to one conclusion. The Emperor was wearing clothes oo the day in question.

Now if you follow the story. the Emperor did not take the word of his aide concerning the weavers—ha sent another aide and this aide also reported hack that the weavers had indeed made a magnificent rohe for his imperial majesty. Let us remember that at this point in time the Emperor was busy with affairs of state and could oot devote time to his clothes. His closest advisers lied to him hut, where, where in all the evidence is there anything to indicate the Emperor himself was part of the coverup?

Now we have been speaking of evidence. The only evidence that the Emperor wore no clothes came from a little boy who was sitting on his father's shoulders as the Emperor went hy.

The boy said, and I quote from his testimony, But he has nothing on." Now anybody can read anything they want into that statement. They can read the Emperor had nothing on his head. They can read he had nothing on for the evening. I defy anyone to show me where the boy said. "He has oo clothes on." And even if he did-even if he did, I am asking this august body-are we going to believe the word of a little boy or are we going to believe the word of our Emperor. the leader of the greatest empire to the world. Mr. Chairman, if the Emperor says he had clothes on, it's good enough for me, Chairman: The hearing is recessed until tomorrow at 10 a.m.

Preminger, O'Toole, 'Rosebud'

week's Paris bureau as a cover. Otto Preminger-who once staged "The Front Page" for Max Reinhardt in Vienna and put the editor in white tie and tails—has this time opted for harsh realism and has moved his film unit three flights down from Newsweek's real offices to the newsroom of the International Herald Tribune, which is early John Peter Zenger in decor—dun colored walls, file cabinets in faded arsenic green, centenary linoleum, and invaluable accretions of Gauloise butts and Paris soot.

Preminger has often said helikes using real people instead of actors. New York ex-mayor John Lindsay has just left after playing a U.S. senator. Newsweek burean chief Ed Behr is playing a Newsweek hurean chief, and despite the early hour the newsroom is filled with real journalists typing with fearful industry and edging their profiles into the scene, which consists of four lines, two for O'Toole (who used to be tea boy at the Yorkshire Evening News) and two for Behr.

Seven takes and it's over.

Preminger, who with his very pink skin and hooded eyes looks like a flayed turtle, is in beaming form for the press. He is the most famous shouter in Hollywood and has left sour memories with such actresses as Jean Seberg ("He's the world's most charming dinner guest and most sadistic director") and Dyan Cannon (expletive deleted), while even his friend Billy Wilder once remarked, "Otto's gone to his summer home-Belsen," and author Allen Drury said of the filming of "Advise and Consent," "This is the first time a film about the democratic process has been made by a dictator." But this morning everyooe is happy and a Tribune deskman has caught the acting hug:

"I also do some singing," he announces shyly, but oo ooe

DARIS (IHT) .- Peter O Toole on the crew listens, They are is a CIA man using News- dashing to the next location, a replica of a Paris police station on the other side of town. A Preminger film is highly organized.

This film is called "Rosebud," not after the sled of "Citizen Kane." but after a yacht which in the film is highjacked by terrorists.

The theme of highjacking and political kidnapping is very timely and the fact that Preminger bought the French novel on which the film is based last September testifies to his astuteness in taking on controversial subjects. But he can hardly be called a bold filmmaker. As an English critic observed of "Exodus," the film managed not only to be pro-Israel, but pro-Arab and pro-British as well.

Aside from regretting that he hasn't turned ont another "Laura," most film critics don't spend much thought on Preminger these days but auteuristes on the other hand are starting to rank him high; an American says he has greater stylistic consistency than Bergman and rates him right up there with Douglas Sirk, the pre-eminent director of Lana Turner, while an article in the leading French film magazine Positif finds him Hegelian, existentialistic and megalomaniacal Preminger himself had the last word when, at the Paris Cinematheque he was asked the traditional question: What is your favorite

"My favorite picture," he replied, "Is my Picasso." Peter O'Toole, asked if Preminger has yelled at him, says, "Hasn't he yelled at everybody?"

O'Toole took some time off from films, during which he rusticated in Ireland and had a feverish season with his aima mater, the Bristol Old Vic. "It seemed a marvelous idea before I did it. It's odd, I don't know how I managed to do three and a half years of it as a kid."

He played in "Uncle Vanya,"

a 1920s Aldwych farce called "Plunder," Shaw's "The Apple Cart," and a new play called "Judgment." The Shaw play has that endless speech about democracy, but "Judgment" democracy, but "Judgment" went even further: in it, O'Toole held the stage, alone, for two hours and 45 minutes. "It was so successful I may do it again-I don't think anyone else is demented enough to do it. We described it as that marvelous literary cop-out, a work in progress. I think it's the most potent new work I've come across. It's not a play. though the place for it is a playhouse."

"Judement," by Barry Collins, deals with a nasty incident in the Soviet Army during the last O'Toole played an accused Russian officer, directly addressing the audience as if they were judges: "We warned the audience both as to subject matter and as to length, and we had certain lines ready for me to say, in case: 'Hold on there, Comrade.' 'Give that Comrade a bag to be sick in.' Or, 'Good-night, Com-returning to the Refore Bristol Old Vic. O'Toole spent a year quietly in his house in western Ireland: "I think that's why I plunged back into repertory. I was very happy doing nothing. I made no plans to write the book or learn the language. I found the first week trying, then the day wasn't Iong enough.

"I did lay some sewer pipes with the help of a superb publication called Bungalow Bliss. My wife called me the Drain Brain. And I built a pump house. It's not the Taj Mahal and it's not exactly square, but it's my pump house." What had O'Toole built before?

"An ul reputation," he replies. He has got better looking now there are silver threads among the gold, but claims to be greatly changed. Twe aged so much no one knows me. They only know my suit." The worn checked suit, which seems to bear the imprint of O'Toole's sharp bones, is his costume for "Rosebud." He also wears what he calls "my lewd bat," a distressing piece of millinery that looks as if it were made of lichen and that was given to him some years ago to go up the Amazon in. "I get invited to parties for my hat, not me." he bossts. "To my astonishment, Otto asked me to wear it for this film. The hat," he says, slapping it on, 'is my performance.'
